What is my family's role in passing on Catholic faith to my child?

Parents are the primary educators of their children. You can help pass on the faith to your child by knowing and reinforcing Catholic beliefs, practices and ways of living and sharing these at home. These elements then become the basis for your child's lifelong growth in faith.

How will my child be evaluated?

Although testing and grading practices may vary between schools or programs, children may be graded on their knowledge of Catholic teachings and practices, but not on faith itself. The outcome of faith formation is to form disciples who "work actively with others to spread the Gospel and build up the Church by witness of their lives and by professing their faith." (RCIA, 75.4)

My Family's Commitment to Sunday Mass

Baptism calls us to holiness. We respond to this call by gathering as a Catholic Faith Community on weekends to give praise and worship to God as a family.
